LEST WE FORGET... TWO MINUTES' SILENCE TODAY AT 11AM

REMEMBRANCE: The Queen yesterday

Iraq hero's tribute

BRITAIN'S latest Iraq War victim was remembered in a royal tribute to fallen heroes. Coldstream Guards colleagues planted a wooden cross for Sgt Chris Hickey, 30, killed by a roadside bomb in Basra on October 18.

His pal Lance Sgt Justin McGowan, from Liskeard, Cornwall, said: "We've lost so many people and this is one of the ways we can give it back to them."

The Queen led yesterday's tributes at the Field of Remembrance in the grounds of Westminster Abbey.

Rows of wooden crosses bore the handwritten names of fallen servicemen and women as well as a blood red poppy

by HELEN FREEMAN

and the words In Remembrance. One of the hundreds of tributes was dedicated to those killed in terror attacks, including the 7/7 London bombings.

Handwritten on it in blue ink were the words "victims of terrorism".

At the regimental plot dedicated to the Black Watch, which lost four soldiers in Iraq on November 4 last year, the Queen commented on the huge number of crosses.

"She said there seemed to be more crosses for the Black Watch than before," said Joe Hubble, a former sergeant major in the Scottish regiment. Among them were crosses remembering Sgt Stuart Gray, 31, Private Scott McArdle, 22, and 19-year-old Private Paul Lowe, all from Fife.

They died in a suicide attack at a vehicle checkpoint when their regiment was deployed to Camp Dogwood.

Mr Hubble, 73, from Faversham, Kent, served in Korea and Kenya and said the service was an emotional time for veterans.

"It brings back huge memories for me, memories of men I knew and served alongside."

"If they're mates, you remember them all the time but, during this particular week, you remember them all. It's hard."

10 BROWNING ST.

MPs urge him to challenge Blair

AMBITIOUS Gordon Brown enjoyed a laugh at rival Tony Blair's woes yesterday.

Pressure was mounting on the Chancellor to oust the struggling Prime Minister from Downing Street. And grinning Mr Brown, widely tipped for the top job, joked about being fed-up with his current post.

Mr Blair is being seen as seriously weakened following his massive defeat in the House of Commons.

One ex-Labour Cabinet Minister said: "It is all up to Gordon. If he wills it to happen, the numbers are there to get rid of Blair."

Chuckling

Mr Blair suffered his first Commons defeat on Wednesday when a rebellion by 49 Labour MPs stalled his anti-terror crackdown.

MPs scrapped plans to lock up terrorist suspects for up to 90 days without charge.

Mr Brown appeared to be chuckling at Mr Blair's woes yesterday, even though he'd had to dash back from Israel for the crucial Commons showdown.

Returning to his peace visit to Israel and Palestine, the Chancellor toured a United Nations-run girls school in the West Bank.

A UN official asked the Chancellor: "Who wants to be a finance minister?"

Mr Brown replied: "No-one, not even me."

When another UN official asked him: "Or even Prime Minister?" the Chancellor just chuckled.

But Mr Blair was defiant at a meeting of the Cabinet, vowing to press ahead with his controversial reform plans.

Mr Blair claimed MPs had "lost touch with reality" over the anti-terror vote.

And Daily Star readers agreed with him.

Our phone poll yesterday found that 60% of callers felt Mr Blair hadn't lost the plot.

Home Secretary Charles Clarke blamed "serial rebels hell-bent" on trying to defeat the Government.

"You do have a group of people who are utterly determined to punch Tony Blair on the nose," he said.

Last night Mr Blair's spokesman said: "The Prime Minister expressed his view that in his opinion, there was a worrying gap between parts of Parliament and the reality of the terrorist threat and public opinion."

But Tory leadership hopeful David Cameron described Mr Blair, 52, and Mr Brown, 54, as "yesterday's men".

Bookmakers Ladbrokes last night slashed the odds on Mr Blair quitting this year.

He went from 50-1 to 20-1 to leave Downing Street by the beginning of next January after a flood of big-money wagers.

Race hate rises

RACE hate attacks soared by nearly a third over the last year, shock new figures revealed yesterday.

But the number of religious-hatred attacks - overwhelmingly targeted against Muslims - has dropped.

A Crown Prosecution Service report revealed that there were 3,961 convictions for racially aggravated offences in the 12 months to last April.

Race crime rose 29% overall. Director of Public Prosecutions Ken Macdonald said: "We are determined to prosecute robustly wherever and whenever we can."

CALUM'S BOOZE-UP FOR BEST

Calum and George. Right

George welcome-home party at lapdance club

MODEL Calum Best will welcome boozy dad George back from the dead with a champagne party.

He's busy organising a bash at London lap-dancing haunt Stringfellows, where the bubbly flows every night.

And guests will toast the release of football legend Bestie from hospital after a touch-and-go spell in intensive care.

Doctors believe the 59-year-old Irish star could be fit enough to go home before the end of the month.

An insider said: "Calum is delighted that his father is getting better and hopes he'll be out in the next two weeks."

"He has spoken to all George's pals to get them out for a lavish meal at Stringfellows to mark the date he is back on track."

"He also wants his dad's ex-wife Alex to join in the close-knit celebration."

The source added: "Calum has been very brave throughout the past few weeks and has been a pillar of strength, so he is looking forward to letting his hair down."

Former Manchester United forward George fought for his life at London's Cromwell hospital after being admitted with flu-like symptoms on October 1.

Kill

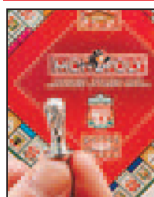

He was taken to intensive care when doctors found he was suffering from a chest infection and internal bleeding.

He had a liver transplant three years ago and was warned that just one more drink could kill him.

Pals say George has made a remarkable recovery and that Calum, 24, can't wait for his dad to be home.

WAX WINNER: Mourinho

Jose's a yummy dummy

■ by IAIN BURCHELL

CHELSEA boss Jose Mourinho has beaten his Premiership rivals to a place in Madame Tussauds because he's such a hit with the ladies.

Mourinho, 42, will be the first waxwork Premiership manager ahead of rivals Sir Alex Ferguson, 63, and Arsene Wenger, 56.

And Madame Tussauds has revealed it was Mourinho's good looks rather than his success at Stamford Bridge that got him the nod.

Dream

A spokeswoman said: "Most of our visitors are female and with respect to Sir Alex and Arsene, Jose is more popular with girls."

His dummy will be part of the Jose's Dream Team attraction which opens on December 7.

His model will look on as visitors pick their dream teams. When they have made their selection, it will give his verdict on their managerial skills.

The spokeswoman added: "We're hoping Jose might give us something to help dress the model."

Where's your poppy Rio?

Oops, he's forgotten again

BUNGLING Rio Ferdinand was left red-faced yesterday after he was snapped on international duty without a poppy.

Defender Rio, 27, has had memory problems in the past - particularly with a drug test.

This time he was the only England star not sporting the remembrance symbol as the squad headed off to play Argentina.

One onlooker said: "He should be ashamed of himself. It's not much to expect people representing their country to remember the people who died fighting for it."

The players were leaving Manchester's five-star Lowry Hotel before flying to Geneva, Switzerland, for tomorrow's match with Argentina.

■ by TOM SAVAGE

Rio's team-mates - including captain David Beckham, 30, Joe Cole, 24, and Michael Owen, 25 - all remembered to pin on a poppy.

Halt

The onlooker added: "Rio's lack of a poppy stood out a mile."

But an England insider said: "Rio didn't mean any harm by it. I don't know if he forgot to pin one on or if he did and it fell off."

"He's likely to be embarrassed by it."

The players will halt training today to join in the national two minutes' silence in memory of those killed fighting for Britain. It's not the first time Rio's forgetfulness has landed him in hot water.

Last month the Daily Star told how he was driving with an out-of-date tax disc on his £50,000 Lincoln Navigator.

And he famously forgot to take a drugs test in 2003 leading to him getting an eight-month ban from the game.

● ENGLAND fans hate Argentina more than any other football rivals in the world.

But more than 65% would like England to play them at next year's World Cup, with 33% saying it would be the dream final.

create yet another bad impression on eve of a big match

by JOHN MAHONEY

WOBBLY Wayne Rooney needed steady hands from three burly minders after a boozy night out as he prepared for tomorrow's England game.

Coach Sven Goran Eriksson might have been expected to order his millionaire stars to bed early before the friendly against Argentina.

But he let his entire squad hit the town on a five-hour spree. And nobody looked to have entered the party spirit more than 20-year-old Manchester United ace Rooney.

As he left Manchester's trendy Living Room bar, at 1am, he needed some help from security staff, who bundled him into a minibus which took the team to their luxury hotel 800 yards away.

Waiting at the five-star Lowry Hotel was boss Sven, 57, who had stayed behind for a cosy dinner with lover Nancy Dell'Olio, 46.

None of the England management team joined the players in the upstairs VIP area at the Living Room, where they knocked back bottles of lager from 8pm with boozy TV comic Johnny Vegas, 34.

One witness revealed: "Rooney looked all over the place. He was really staring at one photographer, and we thought it was going to kick off."

"But then he just broke into a huge grin and that was it. He was led away by three big blokes and it was just as well they were there, because it looked as though Wayne needed a bit of support."

"I don't know if he had lost his footing or what - but he was definitely walking with a little bit of a wobble."

Another punter said: "I tried to

"He had that look like he does on the pitch when things aren't going his way and he's annoyed with the ref. It's like his nostrils start flaring."

"He certainly wasn't staggering, but you could tell from his eyes and his gaze that he had enjoyed a beer or two for sure!"

Rooney was among the first into the bar, followed by Liverpool skipper Steven Gerrard, 25, Chelsea captain John Terry, 24, and Spurs pair Paul Robinson, 26, and Jermaine Jenas, 22.

Arsenal defender Sol Campbell, 31, joined England skipper David Beckham, 30, and Liverpool's beanpole striker Peter Crouch, 24, a few minutes later for the "team bonding" session.

An FA source said: "Sven had given them full permission to have a lads' night out providing there was no silliness and everyone behaved themselves."

"The boys enjoy going to the Living Room because they are looked after well."

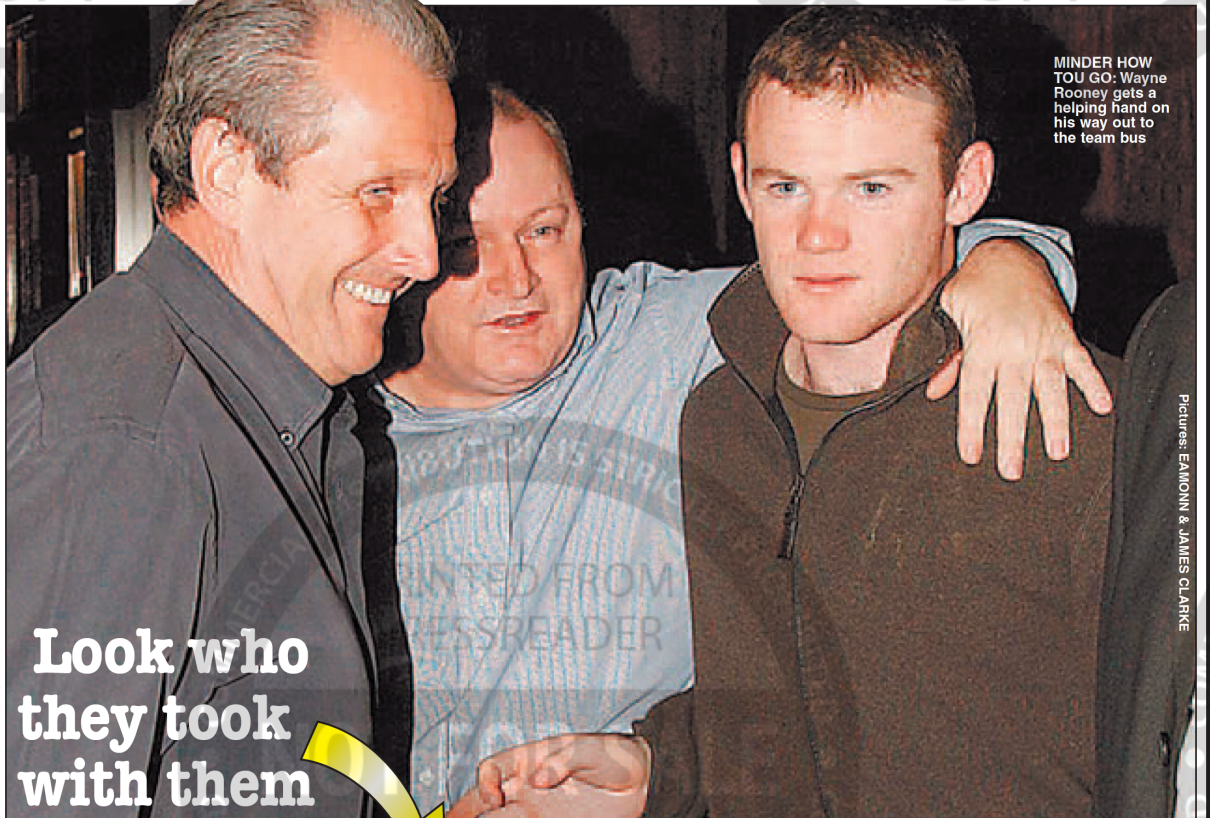

"There was no problem letting them out because it was well over 48 hours before the match and it was good for them to let their hair down."

Giant striker Crouch saw the funny side when one onlooker asked whether he'd "been on long drinks all evening".

...Not bad for a bullied ginger lad who started out by selling maggots

PHONES4U boss John Caudwell is set to become one of Britain's richest men, as he sells his entire empire for £1 billion.

Not bad for a Stoke-on-Trent lad who once sold maggots to scrape a living.

It is only 20 years since he took delivery of his first batch of handsets – all the size of bricks – and it took him eight months to sell all 26 of them.

He now sells 26 phones every MINUTE.

Caudwell, 53, still flies easyJet to his holiday home in the south of France, shaves his own head to save barber's bills and taught himself how to wax his then-wife Kathryn's legs so they didn't have to pay anyone else.

But the pennies he saved have been spent wisely. He lives in a mansion in Market Drayton, Shropshire and travels by helicopter, twin-engined jet and Bentley Azure limo.

Charity

His house parties attract A-List stars. Last year's bash for his Caudwell Foundation charity was headlined by the Sugababes.

After a schooling marred by bullying – because he had ginger hair – his first job was selling football pools and maggots for anglers. He then worked at tyre firm Michelin for 10 years, sold cars and opened a grocery shop.

He set up the mobile phone company with his brother Brian in 1987 when he realised he could gain a discount on phones by buying two at a time. Caudwell Group now includes a string of businesses – ranging from its 350 Phones4U shops and fixed-line telecoms to a firm that repairs 3,000 mobile phones every day.

by TOM SAVAGE

At the peak of his success he paid himself in gold bars and fine wine to avoid National Insurance contributions.

His unorthodox business style includes motivating senior staff by holding meetings with £1m in cash on the desk – to show them what their bonus could look like if they hit their sales targets.

Sexfest

Now the whole empire has a £1bn "for sale" sign, but he says it will only be a matter of months before he's back in some other business.

He wants to spend more time with his family – including ex-model girlfriend Claire Johnson, 35.

His marriage to Kathryn, the mum of his first three children, ended in 2001 after 25 years. He then went on a self-confessed "sexfest" fathering a love child by sexy blonde violinist Jane Burgess.

"I never had the chance to behave like that as a youngster," he said.

DAILY STAR says

United in freedom

DAILY Star readers will want to show their respects today to all the British soldiers who have died in all conflicts to preserve our freedom.

Armistice Day began to remember and honour the 908,371 British soldiers who died in World War I.

The poppies we wear are mementoes of the poppies that grew in the mud of the Flanders fields where so many of our brave boys from Britain and the Commonwealth fell in that first great international conflict.

It's vitally important that we put on a show of unity in these exceptionally dangerous times.

We're in the middle of a war against Islamic terrorism, a sinister new enemy hell-bent on the destruction of the Western world.

The 7/7 London bombings that took the lives of 52 innocent people will be followed by other attacks.

At 11am today we're sure the traditional two-minute silence will be observed.

World War I may have ended 87 years ago.

But we're still fighting for our freedom and our very lives.

As we remember them ... we must also remember that.

England's sober task

WE'RE all for people enjoying themselves by having a few beers.

But there's one thing alcohol doesn't mix well with and that's professional sport.

England's highly-paid footballers were let out on a bender only days before a match against Argentina.

They indulged in a five-hour drinking session in a Manchester city centre bar.

Drink has messed up the careers of a string of talented footballers like George Best, Paul Gascoigne and Paul Merson.

It probably played a part in England's failure to win Euro '96 when they were the best team in the tournament, but clearly not the fittest.

We're not suggesting that our footballers should be teetotallers and we're certainly not killjoys.

But they will never be forgiven if they're not stone cold sober come next summer's World Cup.

Little comfort

TONY Blair needs a shoulder to cry on in the wake of his humiliating Commons defeat over the terror bill.

We know just the man for the job... Little Britain's Sebastian Love.

LEGAL CASE: Zeta Jones

Zeta's plea to Lords

AN epic legal case over clandestine photos of the wedding of Catherine Zeta Jones and Michael Douglas will now be heard in the House of Lords.

The dispute took a new twist last night after the couple and OK! Magazine were given leave to appeal to the highest legal institution in the land.

The couple and the celebrity magazine have been locked in dispute with another publication Hello! since 2000, when Hello! published secret pictures of the stars' New York wedding.

OK! Magazine had signed an exclusive deal to cover the event on behalf of the Zorro actress, 36, and her husband, 61.

The House of Lords decision means the couple and OK! can challenge a decision by the Court of Appeal in June, which reversed a judgment awarding them and OK! substantial damages.

Appalled

The outcome will have significant implications for publishers' rights over exclusive stories.

Hello! published six paparazzi photographs of the wedding.

Ms Zeta Jones told a 2003 High Court hearing she was "appalled" when she realised unauthorised snappers had gatecrashed her high-security wedding at the Plaza Hotel.

A spokesman for Northern & Shell, publishers of OK! said: "Now that the House of Lords has given leave to appeal, it is expected that protection will be granted to publishers with exclusive rights, giving them both the protection of injunctions and an entitlement to substantial damages."

"Northern & Shell, the publishers of OK! and its legal advisers are confident of success both as a matter of law and natural justice."

It's Rich Brother

THE firm that makes Big Brother is preparing for a stock market listing that could value it at more than £1 billion.

Trading in shares of Endemol is set to start later this month when it floats on the Euronext Amsterdam exchange.

The decision by Spanish telecoms giant Telefonica to press ahead with a listing - at 8.8-to-12.8 euros per share - scotches speculation that Endemol could be snapped up by private equity buyers.

STELLA FRENZY

DRESSED FOR A KILLING: Fans grab Stella's gear at H&M in London, and below, Paris, as the clothes went on sale

..and we don't mean lager

TOP British fashion designer Stella McCartney caused a frenzy yesterday when her chic styles hit the High Street - and sold out in just 20 minutes.

by MARIANNA PARTASIDES

The award-winning haute couture catwalk clothes-queen has created her first cheap-and-chic range for chain store H&M.

And trendy shoppers had begun queuing before dawn to get their hands on the latest designs as soon as they hit the shelves in the latest wave of McCartney-mania.

By yesterday afternoon some of the top outfits were already appearing on the eBay internet auction site, as savvy shoppers saw the opportunity to sell on the must-have clothes and make a quick profit in the process.

Chaos

Style chicks who were desperate to get first dibs on the collection mobbed the chain's flagship stores in London's Oxford Street and Paris from 6.30am.

Chaos hit the shop floor as soon as the doors opened just before 9am, as hundreds of customers poured in to find their perfect designer bargain.

And by 9.20am the shelves were stripped bare.

The scene was repeated at the 21 other H&M stores across the country where the super-cool clothes went on sale.

And bosses were forced to bring in fresh supplies to cope with the incredible level of demand. An H&M spokeswoman said: "Most shops across the country have been mobbed. Deliveries have had to have ongoing deliveries throughout the day to keep up with demand."

"Stella's a UK designer and she is very popular here. But nothing has been discussed about a Spring collection yet."

Stella, 34, below, who is daughter of Beatles star Sir Paul, 63, took the fashion industry by storm with her first fashion show 10 years ago.

She launched her own label in 2001 and her sharp suits and floaty tops have been a hit with women ever since.

But the usually sky-high prices at her designer store in London's swanky Mayfair are out of reach for most fashion fans who are forced to keep their wardrobes up to date at bargain prices.

So fans eager to get hold of her skinny zip-up jeans for just under £40 could hardly believe their luck.

And one of Stella's trademark camisole tops is going for a snip - at just £24.95.

Her chunky jumper dresses, which usually sell for a pricey £495, are on sale for £59.99.

The advertising campaign for Stella's High Street experiment had to be scrapped recently after model Kate Moss, 31, was caught snorting cocaine and was ditched by the chain store.

Peter's Potter plottin'

■ by ADAM GILLHAM
FUNNYMAN Peter Kay is planning a third series of Phoenix Nights – and could even turn it into a movie.

The hilarious Channel 4 series – about a social club in Bolton run by wheelchair-bound Brian Potter – was a massive hit.

Now Kay, 32, has revealed he is planning to resurrect the award-winning show.

And he is also considering taking the Phoenix Club onto the big screen.

In an interview with the BBC's digital radio station

RETURN: Potter

BBC6 Music, he said: "It's one of those things where I'm just going to wait until the moment is right, and I've got enough funny stuff, and then off we go again."

Kay added: "I'm thinking of doing a film of it but I don't know."

"They're all right these British films but if you open the same weekend as Tomb Raider you're knackered."

"So I might wait and see. Who knows?"

The interview with Kay will be broadcast on BBC6 Music on Wednesday December 14.

Jamie cut up

■ by MARK JEFFERIES
CHEEKY chef Jamie Oliver could face a grilling from telly bosses after viewers complained about scenes which showed him butchering a lamb.

The 30-year-old cook was filmed sticking a knife through the neck of the animal on his Channel 4 show Jamie's Great Escape on Wednesday night.

Oliver said: "As a chef who has cooked 2,000 of them I should kill one, otherwise you're a fake."

Bloody

"If that offends you, you shouldn't eat them."

But the bloody scenes from his trip to Italy were a turn-off for some of his fans who thought they were too graphic.

And a spokesman for media watchdog Ofcom said: "We have received complaints from viewers which we are now going to investigate."

Zany Tara in a spin

■ by PETER DYKE

WACKY Tara Palmer Tomkinson is already dressed for the jungle.

The It girl, 33, is to join telly host Matt Brown as a co-presenter on the I'm A Celebrity ITV2 spin-off show. And she's got Matt, 32, worried.

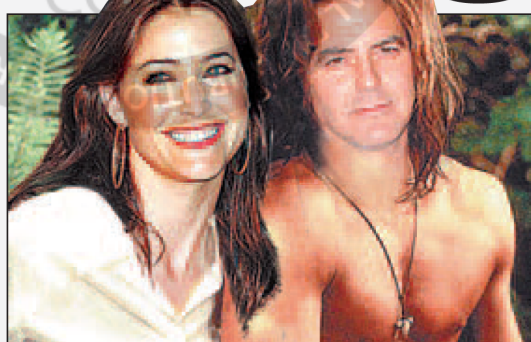

He said: "Tara is utterly bonkers so how do I keep her under control?"

"Well, she's actually given me advice. She said I have to be very strict with her."

"So I'll have to fashion some kind of cane or something."

"And handcuffs, and whips."

George &

STEAMY: How Lisa and George might look together in the jungle

EXCLUSIVE by PETER DYKE and MARK JEFFERIES
TV bosses have offered George Clooney's girl Lisa Snowdon (that's her peachy bottom on Page One) a mega-deal to spill the beans on the hunk.

The former model and TV presenter is believed to have been tempted by more than £500,000 to join other I'm A Celebrity contestants in the jungle.

It would make her by far the best-paid celeb ever to join the top show. Even model Jordan, 27, got less than half that sum when she appeared two years ago.

Brit Lisa, 31, has an on-off relationship with movie hunk Clooney, 43, and was canoodling with him last week at a film premiere in She's even enlisted 23-year-old film star Sienna Miller's personal trainer to ensure she's in shape.

Jen has been spotted working out in London with Charlie Cannon, 28. A pal said: "By the time he's finished she'll be up for a rumble in the jungle."

BLOWN UP AT THEIR WEDDING

Couple's dads are both killed

THE fathers of a bride and groom were among the 57 people killed in the triple bomb attack in Jordan.

Newlyweds Ashraf al-Akhras and his wife Nadia al-Alami happily posed for pictures with their proud dads.

But seconds later both men were killed instantly when a suicide bomber stormed into their wedding reception.

Ten other relatives also died, leaving the banquet hall of the Radisson

by GARY NICKS

Hotel in the capital, Amman, covered in blood and torn limbs.

Two other hotels popular with Westerners were also hit, but most of the dead were Jordanians.

Embassy officials were last night checking if any Brits were among 30 unidentified victims, as al-Qaida terrorists claimed responsibility.

The group, linked to the beheading of Brit engineer Ken Bigley 62, last year, posted an internet statement slamming Jordan.

Explosion

It said: "Some hotels were chosen which the Jordanian despot had turned into a backyard for the enemies of the faith - a filthy place for traitors and a centre for prostitution."

Around 250 guests at Ashraf and Nadia's wedding were injured, including the newlyweds.

Speaking from his hospital bed, Ashraf, 32, said: "The explosion happened the moment we entered."

"We tried to save as many people as we could. I lost my father and my father-in-law at my wedding."

Traditional bride paintings banned...they offend gays!

ART OF ORDER OUT

by JOHN MAHONEY

A REGISTER office is ditching romantic paintings of brides and grooms - in case they offend GAY couples.

Crackpot staff decided that the traditional pictures might upset same-sex partners, who can legally tie the knot from December 5.

So Liverpool Register Office has taken down a portrait of a man and wife signing the register book and another of Romeo and Juliet on a garden swing.

They've been replaced with two landscapes - called River Road and Meadow Sweet - after £3,500 was splashing out to have them carefully restored.

But yesterday even same-sex groups joined critics of the move, which was described as "another case of the whole world going PC barmy".

Dr Adrian Rogers, of the Conservative Family Institution said: "If a heterosexual couple were to get married in the view of an oil painting showing two men or two women getting married, it would offend them. "But I cannot understand why any gay couple would object to this picture. They were conceived from heterosexual unions."

POLITICAL CORRECTNESS GONE MAD

And Mike Homfray, 43, of the Merseyside Gay and Lesbian Forum, said dropping the pictures was "ridiculous".

Lesbian

He added: "This is the 21st century and I'm not offended by a painting of a married couple. It's important to create an atmosphere suitable for everyone."

Gay couple Kevin Smith and Hamilton de Oliveira "wed" last year in a civil ceremony that did not hold legal status.

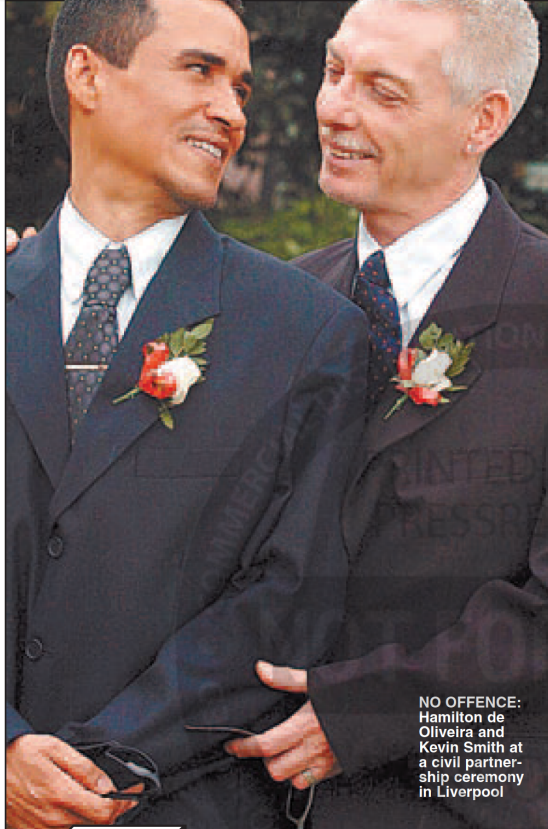

Kevin, 52, from Liverpool, said: "We're not offended by the scenes of a heterosexual couple. We are not in the Stone Age."

"If they want to be really PC they should get paintings of all types of couples - gay, lesbian and straight."

Liverpool registrar Janet Taubman said yesterday: "We had two very beautiful pictures up before, but they would be unsuitable for the new services."

"The new paintings are less likely to offend same sex couples."

Teenager breaks bail on GBH charge then insists ...

I WON'T WEAR A TAG..IT CLASHES WITH MY SKIRT

■ by REG ROBERTS
A TEENAGER won't need to wear an electronic ankle tag because it offends her dress sense.

Natasha Hughes, 18 - who's been charged with grievous bodily harm - broke the conditions of her bail by failing to answer her door to police in the early hours.

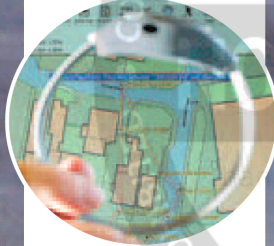

They wanted her tagged so they'd always know where she is before her GBH case is heard.

But her solicitor, David Taylor, told magistrates at Worcester that an ankle tag would be unsightly and unfashionable.

He said: "She wants to wear skirts, not trousers which would cover the tag. Perhaps she could arrange for a doorbell that could be linked to her bedroom."

Magistrates told Hughes: "We don't feel a tag is necessary. But you must make arrangements if you do not wake up yourself."

Hughes said after the hearing: "I didn't want to wear a tag because they are really bulky and embarrassing.

"I like to wear skirts which means people can see it and it looks stupid."

"I am pleased at the decision and am glad I don't have to be tagged."

Hughes, of Arboretum, Worcester, is accused of assaulting and harming another woman. She is expected to enter a plea at Worcester Crown Court on December 5.

Her bail conditions say she must be at home from 9pm to 7am and must always be able to open the door to police. She failed to do so at 2.35am on November 1, claiming she was asleep and did not hear officers.

She is also banned from the St John's area of Worcester and a YMCA building.

DISGRACE: The back garden filled with rubbish which upset neighbours

GET THE HELL OUT & DON'T SCUM BACK

Street party as family get boot

A HORROR family who reduced their council house to a bomb site were kicked out yesterday.

Jobless Dorothy Lane, 32, and her children from hell left it "uninhabitable" and with a £10,000 clean-up bill. Neighbours were so relieved they threw a street party.

The youngsters daubed graffiti on walls, rode motorbikes through the house and turned the garden into a tip.

They wrecked neighbours' gardens, yelled abuse, blasted out music at all hours, and hurled stones at passing cars. The children - boys aged five, 13, and 14 and a girl of nine - urinated into the garden from upstairs windows.

More than 200 neighbours in Carlisle, Cumbria, complained about the family's wild antics. Two families fled their homes to escape the mayhem.

by JERRY LAWTON

And yesterday the Lanes were evicted after a County Court hearing.

Council chiefs say it will cost at least £6,000 to make the house in Longsowerby fit to live in.

Taxpayers will also have to foot the city council's £4,000 legal costs and Lane's rent arrears as she's on benefits.

Relief

Lane failed to appear in court to fight the eviction.

Last night neighbour Jane Harrison, 39, said: "It's an enormous relief. I'm so happy I could cry. It really has been hell having her as a neighbour."

Another neighbour said: "That family is a disgrace to this country. Two families were so fed up living near such a bunch of scumbags they fled their own homes."

JACK AND BOBBY BOOST OUR KATE

KATE Moss is being comforted by Hollywood stars Robert De Niro and Jack Nicholson after leaving a rehab centre in Phoenix, Arizona, we can reveal.

And the 31-year-old supermodel is back on fine form since the cocaine scandal which rocked her world last month.

But we reckon that has something to do with the fact she's been receiving some good advice from the older fellas.

Kate has thrown herself back into work since leaving the specialist clinic and has been spending time socialising with Jack, who she was said to have been romantically linked with earlier this year.

And she's also been taking long walks in Central Park with De Niro.

The unusual three certainly seemed locked in conversation when they hooked up in the trendy Tribeca area of the Big Apple.

Kate dined with Jack, 68, and Robert, 62, in the trendy Tribeca Grill, owned by film star and food guru De Niro. An insider said: "Kate enjoyed dining with Jack and Robert and they reassured her they were there to support her and that everything would be OK for her. It was heartwarming."

"Kate had a bowl of the famous pasta, while they put the world to rights."

"She looked sensational and the three of them were chatting away and giggling."

"Jack ensured she arrived and left via the back door to keep her presence low-key."

Fly

"Robert has also offered Kate the use of a penthouse at the luxury hotel he is opening in the area."

"In the meantime he told her she is more than welcome to stay at his posh pad. But she is busy working and will fly to Europe over the next few weeks."

Fashion gurus are still bending over backwards to work with Kate.

The latest creative director to stick up for her is Burberry's Christopher Bailey, who said: "We are certainly not going to say because of one incident, that she has nothing to do with us. She has always been incredibly professional and she really works."
